CALF hosts Harvest Day near Castle Rock

CALF 9/8—Pumpkins, carriage rides and games are just a few of the time honored fall harvest traditions and old-fashioned family fun that will be celebrated at Colorado Agriculture Leadership Foundation's Lowell Ranch on Saturday, September 27.

Everyone is welcome between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. to stroll the grounds, see the livestock, choose the perfect pumpkins right out of the patch. Depending on the weather, visitors may also be able to harvest a variety of other produce and maybe raspberries! Hayrides, carriage rides, pumpkins, harvesting and other activities are a nominal fee which helps support CALF's mission of Connecting People to Agriculture. Admission and parking are free.

Each year, CALF open's the historic Lowell Ranch to the public to enjoy a variety of exhibits and agriculturally related vendors. Harvest Day will also feature the Moore's historic chuckwagon cooking, apple juice from a real apple press, and other agricultural activities and exhibits for all ages are available provided by CSU Extension Office (which oversees the 4-H program), Colorado and Douglas County Farm Bureau, and Douglas County Garden Club, Historic Douglas County, and fund exhibitors. Dogs on leashes are welcome.

Visitors are invited to enjoy a leisurely lunch from the concession stand provided by Flying Horse Catering, homemade desserts (a fundraiser for CALF), and live music provided by Ryan Chrys and The Rough Cuts from 11:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

For more information on CALF and its programs visit The CALF.org. CALF is three miles south of Castle Rock on the east frontage road of I-25. CALF operates the 133-acre Lowell Ranch on Plum Creek with the aim of connecting people to agriculture.

Broadband support—

telephone service to sparsely populated rural regions, it has been even more challenging and at times cost-prohibitive to ensure rural citizens have access to the digital world of the 21st century.

"Broadband access is at least as vital to rural communities as for the rest of society; the economies of our rural regions, the education of rural children and the public safety of our communities all, increasingly, depend on it."

Club 20's executive director, Bonnie Peterson, echoed these concerns: "It is imperative that rural Colorado communities have access to robust broadband service and that all of those living and doing business in that community have access to that service. This technology has become a significant component in the areas of health, education, safety and welfare."

The Colorado Community Access Alliance is a project of the Colorado Telecommunications Association dedicated to airing the telecommunications and broadband issues of Colorado's farming and ranching communities along the Eastern Plains, San Luis Valley, Mountain Corridors and Western Slope.

GOCO to transform some Colorado school playgrounds with new grant program

GOCO 9/7 – For the first time, the Great Outdoors Colorado (GOCO) School Play Yard Initiative will offer funding for professional design services to successful grantees for the 2015 grant cycle. Over $600,000 will be awarded to six schools over the course of GOCO's competitive grant process for the design and construction of school play yards.

Now in its third year of funding, the GOCO School Play Yard Initiative invests a portion of Colorado Lottery proceeds towards improving outdoor recreation and education spaces for children throughout Colorado. This includes school play yards, outdoor classrooms, and other spaces for free play that have an emphasis on natural components.

Applications for design services are now being accepted for consideration by the GOCO Board, and schools across the state are invited to submit applications in partnership with their local governments. Completed applications are due Oct. 1, 2014.

For complete grant specifications and to download an application, prospective grantees can visit www.goco.org/schools. Any further questions pertaining to the grant application process should be directed to Luke Bolinger at lbolinger@goco.org.

School Play Yard projects must be proposed through a partnership between a local government and a school or school district. Projects should have an emphasis on natural components and must be inspired by students. Funding can be used to develop a new school play yard and/or to enhance or improve existing school play yards.

Applicants for the 2015 GOCO School Play Yard Initiative will take part in a two-step competitive grant process. First, schools and their accompanying local government partners will apply for professional design services. GOCO will award six schools with funding for professional consultants, who will empower students, school staff and administration, local government, and the community in the planning and design process for project construction.

After the design and planning process is complete, the six schools awarded professional design service grants will then compete for up to $684,000 in funds for construction of their play yard. A second application will be required for construction grants.

Successful applicants to receive design assistance will be notified Oct. 17, 2014, and will be expected to submit applications for project construction by Jan. 21, 2015.

Great Outdoors Colorado (GOCO) invests a portion of Colorado Lottery proceeds to help preserve and enhance the state's parks, trails, wildlife, rivers and open spaces. GOCO's independent board awards competitive grants to local governments and land trusts, and makes investments through Colorado Parks and Wildlife. Created by voters in 1992, GOCO has funded more than 3,500 projects in all 64 counties without any tax dollar support. The grants are funded by GOCO's share of Colorado Lottery revenues, which are divided between GOCO, Colorado Parks and Wildlife, the Conservation Trust Fund and school construction.
